YOUR PRESENCE IS ENOUGH

Every time the day of card-giving is coming, I always ask, "how many parents will come to attend our meeting?" Why they are so few and it seems that attending to PTA meeting is not important at all? Why is it hard for them to render time, even a small amount of time to attend school meeting? That one day you care to give them is the only way you and me can communicate; we can talk about your child.

Once a grading period is over, it is a must to call for a parent meeting. It is just equivalent to four times a year to spare your time visiting our school. This one day is a great opportunity to be considered not only for us teachers but also for their children. It is a great timing of knowing your child development, knowing their weaknesses and strengths. You can ask their teacher if there is a behavioral problem involve. Anything you want to learn about your child will be answered only if you will attend a parent meeting or overtime a time will ask for your presence. Though there are times that you needed to be in school, it is a must that you as a parent come to school if the teacher asks you to come.

Some parents will come when the school year will end without knowing their child is facing an academic difficulty. Some will get mad at you why their child has a failing marks. The questions is are you attending a meeting or are you aware of your child difficulties in school. Are you aware of his or her whereabouts after school hours? Are you certain that your child comes to school in regular basis? Did you check your child notebook or ask them if they have upcoming tests? These are just a few questions that needed to be answered, to communicate well. If will happens only if the parents are present in school meeting. But if you are not, we cannot make things right with the learner alone. It must be with the help of both parents. You can determine what fear or what inspiration he or she had. You can learn in what aspect your child is good at or weak so you can provide them what they want and what they need.

Just as you, your presence is simple for you to know what really happens inside the four walls of the classroom. Listening to the concerns of others is simply enough for us to communicate well with your child if they encounter such problems or do they the same as well of their classmates. Your presence will help us, of course you child to face every challenge they faced. Your presence is enough to make them feel proud because of their accomplishment which is certain you are a part of. We can share joys and sadness, solve problems, and guide them fulfilling your child’s dream.
